Here is nearly lost the distinction between a coin and a medal; this piece except for the roc., its mark of value, is in all respects a medal. It is to be hoped that both coins and medals will forever remain each in their special field; surveying the horizon to-day, there is nothing to warrant the belief that they will ever change their names or successfully occupy each other's place; the field for new designs will ever be sufficiently large to give abundant liberty to each. The most accomplished artist may be employed to engrave designs, but restrained from executing his free conception as to what a coin should be. The coins by Roty are to be withdrawn, for great as is his genius, it is not adapted to engraving coin-dies.

I further question the dignity of any government in permitting the advertisement of an engraver to appear upon its coins, however eminent he may be.

The desire for something new or a change has become almost a crying evil; fitness, symmetry and other essential qualities which have heretofore governed in production, are becoming obsolete; the original bearings upon which they were founded have been lost sight of, and it is to be regretted that the craze has entered the coin field, for here it encroaches upon utility and seems to benumb good sense, reason and judgment.

Another, with shield printed in green ink, instead of black (as on preceding); frame of black walnut with gilt moulding, $25\frac{1}{2} \times 29\frac{3}{8}$. A slight discoloration, in lower right corner, probably from water: I regard it as unimportant, otherwise in very choice preservation. Purchased in Washington in 1864, through an officer in the Treasury Department, for \$12.00; the earliest issue, of which but very few got into the hands of the public.

A CATALOGUE of this sale, with prices realized, marked in red ink, will be mailed for 40c., prepaid.

A study of the prices at which coins and medals are selling cannot fail to make bidding more satisfactory. The cost is but a trifle, and a knowledge is thus rapidly acquired by comparison of the different sales, enabling the bidder to make offers which will enhance his chance of obtaining what is desired.
